To the Editors of the Sydney Morning Herald. GENTLEMEN.—The public never having had a particular and minute description of the sufferings I for four years endured whilst living amongst savages, induces me to beg the favour of being allowed a portion of your valuable paper for the purpose of stating the facts myself.—I left Sydney upon the 22nd of September, 1840, in the brig Scout, Captain Stein, and steered direct for Woodlark Island, and made it in the month of November, having had remarkably fine weather during the passage—the brig Scout and barque Lucy Anne were in company. We cruised along the coast, west side, until the 2nd of November at 11 o'clock night, a stiff breeze sprung up from the westward, and afterwards veered round to the north-west with such fury that before eight the next morning seven boats, galley, ten work-pigs, bulwarks, &c., were swept away. At 10 o'clock, fore-top-mast, fore-top-gallant-mast, and jib-boom were carried away, and the hands were miserably clothed, and the wreck. At 12 o'clock the main and mizen masts went by the board, carrying with them the two remaining boats that were on the deck. We now tried the pumps, and found five feet water in the hold, and which so rapidly increased that all hands were kept constantly employed working them. The breeze continuing to increase until three o'clock, the barque was now almost entirely at the mercy of the huge mountain waves, and the Scout was having the slightest idea where we were. In this condition we continued all night, expecting every moment to be our last, until four o'clock the following morning, when the Scout struck upon the Laughlin's Reef, and swept away five hands, consisting of Chief Mate Thomas Settle, a Sydney native; Third Mate Thomas Welsh, a French boy; a Rotumah native; and an American. The starting of the Scout knocked John Cheers, a native of Sydney, into the hold, and was crushed to death. Another man, of the name of Shipyard, had his arm broken, and so severely injured that he did not expect him to live. The remaining hands, except the now wrecked vessel, until the sea had gone down, which was not until two days, when we ventured ashore, taking with us upon a raft which was made of the wrecked body of John Cheers, and several of the crew who were maimed, provisions, &c. Upon our landing, we were kindly received by a man and boy, natives, who supplied us with coconuts. The following morning we buried John Cheers; and the natives afterwards led us down the beach, and showed us the dead bodies which were washed ashore, which we buried; the Captain and crew could see no ships; but returned in two days without success. All hopes were now given up of ever seeing a ship, and it was agreed to build a schooner; so we used to work, and took the foremast out, the only standing spar in her, for a keel; broke the wreck up, and sent on shore anything we considered might be of service to us; as we now set to work, and were engaged on as well as could be expected for a period of six months, when the steward became ill and died, and afterwards, six of the other seamen, who died also; then the captain, doctor, carpenter, and two seamen who were lying sick, were proceeding on board one morning, for the purpose of stepping the mast, having been now nine months on the island, when the natives rushed upon us, killing the captain, cooper, the doctor, and two seamen who were lying sick. We remained upon the schooner that night, the natives not allowing us to come on shore, and refused to give us any water or biscuits, so we were obliged to put up with a six-oared whale boat, and a small dingy of the Captain's, containing twelve seamen and three natives, and steer for Woodlark Island, which we accomplished in eight days, having been detained by the natives, who were living upon a barren rock about twenty miles off the land, where we got a supply of birds, having had previously nothing to eat. Upon our landing we were received by the natives kindly, who induced us to their huts, when a chief by the name of Eton, led me away to another town, and next morning one of the Loughton natives came to me and told me the whites were all dead, and that they had come and surrounded me as I sat, and were proceeding to kill me, when the previously mentioned chief prevented it. After living for about two months with them, I tried to make my escape in a small dingy, but was caught in the attempt and appeared in six different places. After my recovery I made my escape, in a small canoe, to another town, and got speared again in four places; here I lived for a considerable time, and then ran away, and fortunately fell in with a friendly tribe, with whom I continued until the barque Woodlark hove in sight; twice I laboured under fever and ague of six and three months duration. After my arrival on board the Woodlark I was passed the succeeding day to the Tyburn, in consequence of my body and extremities being covered all over with sores. Here I remained for five months, and got well; and arrived in Sydney after an absence of four years and a half, four years of which were spent amongst savages.

This is to certify, that William Valentine, who was under my care on board the brig Tyburn, from injuries received by the natives of Woodlark Island, I consider for ever unfit to follow the sea as a means of living, and in consequence of the rheumatic attacks which the injuries there received will subject him. This hip joint is so affected.

T. B. HAYTON, M.R.C.S.I., (late Surgeon to the brig Tyburn).

TO PLEASE THE JUVENILES at home for the holidays, the FANTOMAS will be performed this evening, positively for the last time. Clown (second time) Mr. Riley.

ON TUESDAY EVENING, MARCH 25, WILL BE PRESENTED, for the second time at this theatre, an entirely new romantic-melodrama, in three acts, called TIE BANDIT CHIEF OF THE ALPINE FOREST. After a Pas Seul, by Miss Kell; and a favourite Song, by Mrs. Bushelle. Estimate of the Probable Expenses of the Establishments for the Administration of Justice in the Colony of New South Wales, for the year 1845.

Now, from Mr. WINDEYER'S assertion, any man conversant with the forms of parliamentary business, would suppose this Estimate to have been drawn up as follows:—

Total amount required £28,000
Amount provided for by the Schedule 20,000

Deficiency to be provided for by the Council £ 8,000

But what is the fact? Why, that the estimate is as minute as an estimate ever was or can be, specifying item by item the whole of the expenses under their several subdivisions, beginning with the salary of the CHIEF JUSTICE, and ending with "Fuel and Light." The items are eighty-six in number, occupying four sheets of foolscap. The sum total, after deducting on the first page £6500, being the amount of the Judges' salaries provided for by the Schedule, is brought out on the fourth page, as—£27,650 16 3

Provided for by Schedule A, of 5 and 6 Victoria, cap. 76 20,000 0 0

"Amount proposed to be appropriated 7,650 16 3"

We ask any unprejudiced man, what fairer course could the GOVERNOR have pursued? What more open course could the Council have required? The whole estimate was before them; and, with the exception of the guaranteed salaries, it was quite competent for them to go through the items seriatim, and after striking out or reducing as they might think proper, either to vote such sum as should then be found deficient, or pass a resolution declaring the provision of the Schedule to have been amply sufficient.

DOMESTIC INTELLIGENCE.

CRICKET MATCH.

YESTERDAY, pursuant to arrangement, the Union Cricket Club took the field for the first time; they selected as their opponents the Currumbidgee Club, stipulating that Sly and Homer, the best bowlers of the Currumbidgee, were not to play. The fielding on both sides was very good. The Currumbidgee took the match with only twenty-three runs to spare, being the least difference of any match that has been played this season.

SOUTH AUSTRALIAN STATISTICS.

THE South Australian of February 11th contains some statistical returns relative to the province of South Australia, of which the following is an abstract:—

REVENUE AND EXPENDITURE.—The receipts for the quarter ending 30th September, 1844, amount to £7194 17s. 4d., and the expenditure for the same quarter to £7012 10s. 2d.; but of the above amount of receipts the sum of £990 arises from drafts drawn upon the Lords of Her Majesty's Treasury, while the sum £6204 17s. 11d. is included among the current expenses of the quarter for the repayment of similar aid from the Treasurer, and the discharge of interest due upon debentures. The actual amount of colonial receipts for the quarter is therefore £6199 17s. 14d., and the actual amount of colonial expenditure for the same period £6069 12s. 3d. For the quarter ending 30th December, 1844, the receipts are £6929 6s. 3d., and the expenses £6591 18s. 4d., but of the latter sum £167 4s. 9d. is for the repayment of Treasury advances, and £441 6s. for the payment of interest upon debentures, thus reducing the amount of actual colonial expenditure for the quarter to £5783 7s. 7d. The principal heads of revenue which exhibit an increase in this quarter over that of the quarter ending 30th September are the Customs receipts, and the amount upon live stock, the last of which is a new source of income, amounting in the last quarter of 1844 to £1486 3s. 11d.
